QUAKE PANIC: Residents in Cebu City run scared as reports of a tsunami swept the city after a 6.9-magnitude earthquake shook the Central Visayas metropolis on Monday. The earthquake's epicenter was placed near Tapanan town in Negros Oriental. The Philippines lies in the Pacific "Ring of Fire" and is prone to earthquakes and volcanic eruptions.

Many still buried in 10 meters of rubble

By Aina Pal and Florence Bana Inquirer Visayas

DUMAGUETE CITY—At least 52 people were killed when a 6.9-magnitude earthquake hit Negros and Cebu provinces shortly before noon yesterday, causing landslides and huge cracks on highways, and violently shaking buildings, officials said.

A three-story building collapsed, while seven bridges were rendered impassable, they said.

In Guadalupe City, Negros Oriental, at least 28 people were feared dead following a landslide in Barangay Pison, Mayor Ernesto Reyes said in a phone interview. He said there could be more fatalities in other barangays.

"They were buried in 10 feet (3 meters) of soil. If you had been buried from noon until now (6 p.m.), I don't expect you to be alive," Reyes said.

Senate OKs opening of CJ bank records

By Michael Lim Ulloa and Cynthia D. Balana

THE IMPEACHMENT court yesterday declined to subpoena Chief Justice Renato Corona's bank records since 2009, including his foreign currency deposits, a move that the prosecution team of the House of Representatives said would be "crucial" in proving that the Chief Justice misdeclared his statements of assets, liabilities and net worth (SALNs).

Tribunal Salvador III, a defense lawyer, said the defense panel was still studying its legal strategy, insisting that the prosecution's attempt to scrutinize several bank accounts that Corona allegedly owned was not related to the second impeachment article—the Chief Justice's failure to declare his SALNs.

In a ruling read by Senate Majority Leader Vicente Sotto III, the Senate impeachment court lifted the efficacy of the Bank Secrecy Law insofar as Corona was concerned, subject to "specific limits."
The Senate impeachment court is exempted from Republic Act No. 1410, or the Bank Secrecy Law.

Taiwan air-nav system to rise on Spratlys isle

TAIPEI—Taiwan's defense ministry on Monday said it was preparing to set up an air navigation system on the disputed Spratly Islands, in a move that could spark fresh tensions in the South China Sea (West Philippine Sea).

Defense ministry spokesman David Lu said the system, known as the "Taiwan navigation system," will help guide flights to emergency on Spratly Island, the largest island in the Spratly chain.

"The system has a receiver and will not pose any real threat to aircraft in the area," Lu told Agence France Press.

The system consists of a beacon that emits signals to aid ships approaching at night and the location of an emergency landing strip.

Taiwan's 1,220-sq-km Spratly Island is the largest of the 15 islands in the Spratly chain, which are part of the Philippines.

Lu said the system will be installed on the island.

Big nickel mining firm says rains caused pollution of bay

By Franklin A. Colapinto
Inquirer Staff Writer

BUZSAN CITY—A large-scale nickel mining firm has disputed charges that its operations had polluted the waters of Cebu Bay, the center of Cebu, the Philippines' second largest city.

"The waters may be discolored, but it does not mean it's dirty," a spokesman said. "It's already polluted," said Regino Cabanatan, manager for environmental safety, health and security of Tuguea Mining Corp. (TMC). "The reported pollution is not due to activities from our mining operations but because of rain, a natural phenomenon."

One of the country's leading exporters of nickel ore, TMC and three other big mining companies based in the Cebu region are being investigated by the Mines and Geosciences Bureau (MGB) for alleged violations of environmental and health hazard laws, particularly massive effluents and pollution in Cebu Bay.

Cabanatan said his firm was strictly abiding by government regulatory measures to achieve mining, environmental and health standards are sustained. "In fact, our water quality levels are within DENR [Department of Environment and Natural Resources] standards," he said.

"As far as TMC is concerned, it is always compliant with environmental standards and regulations," he told the bureau.

On Friday, Mines and Geosciences Bureau Director General Jose Antonio Llanes conducted a field survey of TMC's nickel mine. He said water pollution caused by effluents was evident in Cebu Bay brought about by mining activities in the area.

"I observed that the waters of Cebu Bay were colored orange due to effluents. Clearly, there was non-compliance with environmental standards and health hazard laws on the part of the firm," Llanes told the bureau.

He said leakage at the site's containment dam used by the firm for their municipal effluents caused the effluents, which posed serious threats to the environment and the health of people in the communities.

Cabanatan said the director's statement of the mine was an "exclusive proof of massive pollution," he said. "It is a perpetual issue lifting up and down and it is not a one-time thing."

Monitoring teams, composed of DENR officials, environmentalists and non-governmental organizations, and local officials, will be seen to check the plant and, if necessary, request more action against the mining firm.

The monitoring teams will also look into allegations of non-compliance with terms of business and cases to court cases.

The mining industry in Cebu, which is based in more than a dozen multinational mining firms, has been accused of environmental damage, including the acquisition of mine permits, degradation of indigenous communities and non-compliance of correction, health and safety measures.

more firms and more.

Antonio said he would not deny the fact that the waters of Cebu Bay are polluted, but he said the pollution is not due to mining activities.

Jose Regino Cabanatan, spokesman for TMC, said the firm's nickel mine is a 1,300-hectare land in Buhangin, Agaña del Norte, has been ordered to stop mining by the DENR.

More funds sought for 'Sendong' victims

PEOPLE of Butuan dressed up in traditional garb welcome 200 amateur photographers who headed the call to volunteer time and document the reconstruction of centuries-old rice terraces that have eroded through years of strong monsoon winds in Butuan.

ILIGAN CITY—The United Nations (UN) has asked the international community for more funds to effectively meet the humanitarian challenge "Sendong" that lashed this city over a month ago.

From an initial amount of $26.4 million, the UN Office for Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) is appealing for $30 million in response to the estimated 100,000 people who were the period of the storm.

In fact, the agency said $5.5 million had been raised, including $2 million donated from the UN Central Emergency Response Fund (ERF) to support aid activities in the immediate aftermath of the storm.

The disaster areas brought by Sendong triggered flash floods in 15 provinces on Dec. 16-18 last year. According to UN estimates, nearly 40,000 houses were damaged and 525,000 people lost their livelihoods.

More than 200,000 were also displaced from their homes. In Butuan, the UN Office for Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) said, the city was hit by the storm.

Seven weeks after the disaster, some 21,000 survivors remain in crowded evacuation centers in Cagayan de Oro and Iligan, and more than 40,000 people are still in need of shelter.

The new appeal includes $6 million in 12 key areas, including food, shelter, health, and education, and reconstruction, the OCHA said.

"I have been tremendously privileged to witness the heroic efforts of the government, and organizations, civil society and the affected communities themselves to provide vital assistance to thousands of suffering survivors," Butuan said.

"Unaided, progress from aid support is crucial to stable progress of basic growth and recovery from the rebuilding of resilient communities," Butuan said.

Butuan said the UN Office for Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) said, the city was hit by the storm.

200 photographers pick up shovels for rice terraces

MANILA, (The Philippine Daily Inquirer) — A group of 200 photographers, including some of the world's best, have gathered in Butuan to help rebuild the centuries-old rice terraces that have eroded through years of strong monsoon winds.

More than 200 amateur photographers converged in this coastal town, some coming from as far as the Philippines' capital, Manila, to help rebuild the centuries-old rice terraces that have eroded through years of strong monsoon winds.

They were drawn here by photographer John Chua, who mounted a photo safari and a "photo safari" photography school to raise their awareness about the plight of the city's centuries-old terraces, which have eroded through years of monsoon winds.

They were quickly drawn to the damaged terraces and were asked to dig up trenches where the terraces had eroded.

They said the school was organized to help rebuild the centuries-old rice terraces that have eroded through years of strong monsoon winds.

Caloocan burglar kills widow, wounds 3 kids

Attacker struck as she prepared breakfast; reward offered

By Kristine Feliciano Mangunoy

A WIDOW was assaulted dead and her three children, all injured, were seriously wounded by a man previously linked to a string of burglaries and who subsequently targeted their home early Monday morning in Caloocan City.

The three children were managed to identify the attacker, who remained at large, as someone from their own community in Barangay 140, police said.

Police dispatched the family to San Antonio, 36, who was admitted to the hospital at the United University Hospital.

The three children—aged 13,

11, and 11—all sustained neck wounds. The eldest was in danger of dying because of a wound in the back, while the two others were still at the intensive care unit as patients.

The suspect, Juan Luis Gomez, 16, has been linked to previous burglaries in the barangay according to SPOT (Special Police Operation Team) intel.

of the Caloocan City police sub-view. Mayor Edgar Vito Jr. filed a P50,000 reward for Clasen's arrest.

Investigation showed that Clasen allegedly climbed into the Aguila residence through a window of the bedroom area shared with her three children.

The break-in happened at around 4 a.m., when she and her 13-year-old child were still asleep in the kitchen preparing breakfast.

"The two other siblings were still inside the bedroom, when the suspect entered the house using a window in the same area, the two children did not feel the presence because they were still asleep," said PJO Juan Bernaldo, the case investigator.

Clasen then stormed into the kitchen, grabbed the knife, and attacked her who was then bleeding profusely at the dining table. She offered help to the child who was also in the kitchen to protect her but was also stabbed.

The attacker moved the three children away from their sleep. The suspect then turned to them when they started screaming for help.

Ty holding company files bid to go public this year

GT Capital to raise up to P24.6B from share sale

By Doreen C. Sison

THEFTY Group Inc. has filed an application with the Securities and Exchange Commission to conduct an initial public offering for its holding company GT Capital Holdings Inc. (GT Capital), worth as much as P24.6 billion.

The offering, which seeks to take advantage of the strong interest in infrastructure as a proxy for the largest domestic economy, will consist of up to 11.22 million shares and an over-allotment option of 4.34 million shares.

This offering will be offered for up to P238 million, suggesting a P21.6 billion equity deal. This can increase to P24.6 billion if the over-allotment option will be exercised. This equity raise will be used for public listing as well as 90 percent of GT's outstanding stock.

Of the total offer, up to 10 million will consist of primary issuance shares, suggesting that as much as P17.1 billion in new money can flow into the holding firm, which has investments in building (Metropolitan Steel and Steel Co.), and cement (Philippine Portland Cement Co.), automotive (Dynamilis Philippines), insurance (PFI Life Insurance Corp.), and power generation (PFI Power). The firm's subsidiaries will be secondary shares. It is affiliated with the principal shareholders.

The documents indicated that GT will be the sole global asset manager, and listed its subsidiaries and lead manager while in domestic incorporation in a first interim investment. The company has yet to determine an exact date for the offering except that it is expected to be completed within 2012.

The P17.1 billion in proceeds from the primary component of the offering will be used to expand various operating units. For instance, up to P6.36 billion will be used for the rapid opening of Federal Land 2012, particularly in landlocked regions, projects like Grand Manila Metro, Manila South and Metropolitan Circle.

Other PFI subsidiaries plans are P1 billion to increase an option to acquire a 44.4 percent share in Chidambaram Power up to P1 billion for Sison's expansion; P4 billion to repay existing debt of GT Holdings; and 10 billion for new business development, including possible participation in infrastructure projects, business process outsourcing, renewable energy and general corporate programs.

As of end 2010, GT Holdings had total resources of P49.33 billion. It posted a net income of P5.22 billion in 2010 compared to P5.37 billion a year ago.

Pushing on

MARKET RIGOR

DERE JENNETH

THE MARKET continued to post more gains in February started, driving the benchmark index to its highest level since late 2010. On Thursday, Feb. 2, when the Philippine Stock Exchange index or PSE closed at 4,812.86, by the close of trading on Friday, it hit 4,834.14, its highest level and all-time high record. One that has been around since the collapse five years ago of the US stock market, which ignited the most serious contemporary financial and economic downturn that has continued to rock the world market today.

Before a crash, too, the current market setup is a product of a number of positive outlook on the government's development program aimed at making greater economic growth by 2022 and beyond.

As of today, however, the government has put in place a better economic performance set of its development program.

For the full year 2011, the government has achieved that the country's gross domestic product grew by 6.5 percent. For the second half of the year, government officials, this was a "solid performance" compared to the 7.4 percent growth record in 2010.

In his formal public opening, President Benigno Aquino III said that the country's economic performance is "solid" within the growth rate measure of 6.5 to 7 percent, which he said is "a good sign" for the country's growth. He said that the country's growth rate was below the 4.5-5.5 percent growth assumptions made by the Development Budget Coordination Committee (DBCC), an advisory body to the government's economic development on development as a figure and "a sign of budgeting" only.

Also, while this performance record was below the 5 percent growth target set by the government in its national development plan for 2011, this was because the economic depression was too bad and the recovery and new economic growth is "a good sign" for the country's growth. He said that the country's growth rate was below the 4.5-5.5 percent growth assumptions made by the DBCC, an advisory body to the government's economic development on development as a figure and "a sign of budgeting" only.

BDO eyes bond issuance overseas

THE COUNTRY'S largest bank, Banco de Oro (BDO), plans to tap the overseas bond market for the first time in two years, seeking to take advantage of low interest rates and a strong investor appetite for investing their funds.

BDO disclosed to the Philippine Stock Exchange yesterday a proposal to issue dollar bonds under senior notes and the smaller group to issue investment grade debt to its subsidiaries and joint bank managers.

in two infrastructure projects as well as social services. "Accordingly, it has made huge capital outlay in the last three months of the year that should offset the minimal government spending. That last investment growth in the last three months of 2011.

As of Jan. 12, too, the government has already released about 75.1 percent of P130 billion (84.4 billion of the P200.5 billion) capital outlay it has allocated for various infrastructure projects for 2012.

To quote Secretary Pichay's public opening, the government is "providing" a "solid" for the country's growth. He said that the country's growth rate was below the 4.5-5.5 percent growth assumptions made by the DBCC, an advisory body to the government's economic development on development as a figure and "a sign of budgeting" only.

These initiatives were expected to result in a solid economic performance in 2012. due to the current pump priming spending, too, the government's growth rate was below the 4.5-5.5 percent growth assumptions made by the DBCC, an advisory body to the government's economic development on development as a figure and "a sign of budgeting" only.

This will further intensify the second half of 2012 as the general population will experience added competition from the state's economic stimulus spending that will amount up to the national and local election in 2013. Together with the small volume of the country's market, higher consumer spending will be expected.

Indicators added to public opinion that government "will continue" to use its efforts to diversify its economy, both in terms of products and countries, and to make its economic strategies, not only by creating the rapid acceleration of government expenditure, but also through the implementation of the appropriate policies.

As spelled out in the Philippine Development Plan 2011-2016, the country's growth rate will be 4.5-5.5 percent.

Despite these field developments, the country's growth rate is 6.5 percent. For the second half of the year, government officials, this was a "solid performance" compared to the 7.4 percent growth record in 2010.

Philippines said to be least vulnerable to financial shocks

ATM/POS/24-hour banks in the Asia-Pacific are facing higher risks due to the prolonged debt crisis in the euro zone, those in the Philippines may not be as heavily impacted as the rest of the region, Moody's Investors Service said.

The credit rating firm said that, compared with its counterparts in the region, the Philippines' banking sector is considered to be one of the least vulnerable to financial shocks stemming from the crisis.

Moody's cited 16 Asia-Pacific economies in terms of exposure to risks. Only the banking sector of the Philippines and Indonesia were placed in the "low exposure" category.

In a report, Moody's said Asia-Pacific banks should weather the crisis in the Euro, but it would not be immune from the adverse effects. It said that the region's throughout Asia-Pacific would have to cope with measures to manage risks.

"Our central scenario assumes a resolution of the eurozone crisis by 2012. However, as eurozone uncertainties, a protracted weak recovery in our surveillance that have the potential of deepening into long-term challenges should be particularly apparent," Moody's said in its report.

Investment and investment made by Asia-Pacific banks in recent debt issues, and the decline in the region's export income posed the greatest threat.

Moody's stressed that, although the risk factors remained low, the probability of an adverse outcome had increased.

The risks of Asia-Pacific banks remain the region's most vulnerable to external shocks, it explained. Michelle K. Brown

Tourism to benefit from P182-B infra fund

By Rosal W. Domingo

MANILA (AP) — In unveiling the bill of the P182-billion budget submitted this year for infrastructure projects to help the tourism sector from 2012 and 2013, President Benigno S. Aquino III said the country is ready to attract more tourists.

"Our ultimate goal is to attract 10 million tourists a year by the end of President Aquino's term," he added.

The infrastructure package includes the P182-billion budget of the Department of Public Works and Highways for the construction of roads, bridges, and other infrastructure projects.

Also, a bill of P12 billion has been submitted to the Department of the Interior for the construction of a new international airport in Pangasinan, while P1 billion will be directed to the Port of Manila Super Development project.

P8B raised in T-bill auction

BTr: Investors continue to prefer long-term debt paper

By Rosal W. Domingo

THE TREASURY bill on the 91-day Treasury bill rose by 0.4 basis points to an average of 1.784 percent as the government auctioned a billion pesos in the secondary market.

Investors' average for the benchmark T-bill was 12.7 basis points below the corresponding 1.879 percent for the three-month bill in the secondary market.

Investor rates on the 91-day bill rose by 1.3 basis points to an average of 2.235 percent. Rates for the 364-day bill peaked at 3.8 basis points to an average of 2.426 percent, but the BTr did not award the entire volume.

The auctioning average for the six-month bill was 21 basis points higher than the 1.475 percent rate prevailing at the Philippine Treasury and Exchange Corp. at the time of the auction, the year-long bill, the yield was 23.9 basis points higher than the 1988 rate.

National Treasury Secretary S. Tan said in his interview that the auction reflects investors' preference for long-term debt paper.

Land Bank remits P5B to state coffers

LAND BANK of the Philippines yesterday reported that it earned P10 billion in net profit last year, P5 billion of which has been remitted to state coffers to help fund various economic stimulus projects of the government.

The dividend from Land Bank 2011 income was the highest ever received by a state firm, it said.

In a statement, Land Bank said its income last year rose up 15 percent from the previous year's P8.2 billion. It was driven largely by an increase in lending activities and efforts to improve operating performance.

"We made solid progress in 2011, and we are looking forward to continued growth in 2012," Land Bank president and CEO said in the statement.

The state firm's total resources rose by 13 percent year-over-year to P308.9 billion.

According to PHIL, the bank intends to lend more in 2012, especially to priority sectors, such as infrastructure, and owner-to-small and medium enterprises.

The bank will also continue to build its operating assets by accumulating loans from the government.

In 2011, Land Bank reported that there was a 17 percent increase in deposits, growing by 17 percent over P207.3 billion.

The bank also cited an improvement in its ability to attract credit facilities and other types of loans when its capital resources reached by 23 percent to P71.6 billion.

As a result, the bank now enjoys a capital adequacy ratio of 18.47 percent, higher than the minimum 13 percent required by the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas.

Land Bank said the dividend is related to the government should help in funding development projects without compromising efforts to reduce the budget deficit.

The government incurred a budget deficit of P96.25 billion in the first 11 months of 2011, much lower than the P287 billion projected in the same period last year.

The government wants to further reduce its deficit as it aims for an investment-grade credit rating for the country within a year or two. Michelle K. Brown

PH to secure P4B in loans from ADB, Opec fund

By Michelle K. Brown

THE PHILIPPINE government will seek close to P4 billion from the Asian Development Bank and the Opec Fund for International Development (OFID) to fund rehabilitation and modernization of national roads in the country.

A study conducted by the ADB showed that the government would need P10 billion annually by 2015 to fund the road improvement and modernization. Projects, of which the ADB and OFID are asked to finance a combined 392 projects for about P4 billion.

In partnership, ADB has been asked to shoulder 362 million, while OFID will account for $10 million of the project cost through loans.

The national roads project has already been submitted for approval by ADB's board of directors.

According to the ADB report, the maintenance and rehabilitation of key roads in the country are vital to the country's development.

"The project will address the infrastructure investment in the national highway network by financing detailed engineering design for improvement of national roads to be implemented under three projects," ADB said.

The report also cited the need to improve the capacity of concerned government agencies, led by the Department of Public Works and Highways, to manage various infrastructure projects.

As such, the project will cost capacity development for DPWH.

The ADB report also said the need for better infrastructure in the country to attract more investments needed to create more jobs and reduce poverty incidence.

Various studies showed that poor infrastructure was one of the reasons why the Philippines lagged behind in Southeast Asia neighbors in terms of attracting foreign-direct investments.

According to some estimates, infrastructure investments in the Philippines is less than 3 percent of the country's gross domestic product compared with the average of 8 percent in the region.

Mandarin goes all out to celebrate Chinese New Year

CHINESE NEW Year revelers celebrated the grandest feast the city of Honolulu at the Mandarin Oriental, Maui, as the hotel staged its 16th straight year of festivities to welcome the lunar new year of the Water Dragon.

Behind the spectacle was the hotel's resident lion-dance troupe, sponsored by the Maui Arts & Culture Center.

The auspicious celebration was held with a luncheon at the hotel's main dining room, the Mandarin Oriental, Maui, with the support of the Maui Arts & Culture Center.

Three dancing dragons were the main attraction of evening, from the outdoor program to the elegant dinner in the ballroom.

The celebration featured rituals and ceremonies designed to usher luck and bring good chi throughout 2012.

Guests dined and danced before the lion dance at the hotel's main dining room, the Mandarin Oriental, Maui, where guests gathered to watch such other "lucky" events.

The most intense exercise is the one that burns the most calories even if it's only for a short time. So, over time when you become consistent, the after-burn effect of exercise will help you manage your weight effectively as compared to sitting down.

That effect has been of interest to scientists trying to lose weight with various exercise methods to determine which method is ultimately most effective to burn calories before and even after you are finished, just like the high intensity interval training (HIIT). It's a form of cardiovascular exercise that alternates the periods of short intense anaerobic exercise with moderate or low intensity recovery periods.

Safety considerations

Due to the training intensity of HIIT, you will need to consult your doctor if you have any pre-existing conditions, especially heart, lung or joint problems, and long-term exercise participation.

• Before engaging, consult with your doctor if you have any pre-existing conditions.

physicians, especially if you have existing conditions, before engaging in a long-term and short-term program. This could mean a fitness program for you. Some exercise programs should be taken in a short-term, high-intensity interval and duration, and this should match your own fitness goals, age, gender, fitness level and health status.

Several studies showing the effectiveness of HIIT, as compared to continuous endurance training, have caught the attention of scientists who have been trying to improve their sports or fitness performance and weight management efforts.

Recent research shows that doing HIIT is more effective than traditional long-duration training when it comes to cardiovascular and skeletal muscle adaptations. The study was able to take or run longer in a greater intensity because you can accomplish these cardiovascular interval endurance training for preventing cardiovascular disease in adolescents. During this study, the researchers found that the moderate intensity group completed a total of 4.0 minutes of exercise and the high intensity group completed a total of 1.0 minutes.

HIIT protocols

It's often and how can you incorporate HIIT into your regular fitness routine? HIIT is a form of exercise that alternates the periods of short intense anaerobic exercise with moderate or low intensity recovery periods.

• HIIT can always be incorporated into your existing fitness routine, and you don't need to change your exercise program completely. Studies show that doing the program three times a week, at moderate intensity, will produce significant effects. For long-term exercise programs, once a week is usually sufficient, especially if you already have this program with your traditional long-term exercise program.

A good example is a runner's program. Once a week of interval training (HIIT), once a week of easy run and once a week of long slow run. Or more, at least once a week of strength and core training should always be included.

• Always start with at least 10 to 30 minutes of warm-up and the same amount of time for cool-down.

• According to the American Heart Association, the best way to incorporate HIIT into your regular fitness routine is to do it three times a week, at moderate intensity, will produce significant effects.

Simple ways to increase calorie burn

You don't really need to follow strictly the HIIT training protocol. If you don't have a coach, you can't always have your fitness level and don't have enough time to implement a formal exercise program while maintaining your busy life. You can still maintain your calorie burn before and after your chosen physical activity.

• Bounding and walking (1.25) - Bounding is like a low-impact, low-intensity exercise, and you can do it for 10 minutes and repeat the cycle three times.

• Core workout (1.1) - Use any aerobic machine (cycling, rowing, or power) for one minute at a high intensity (90 percent effort), slow down for 30 seconds and repeat the cycle three times.

• Bounding and walking (1.25) - Bounding is like a low-impact, low-intensity exercise, and you can do it for 10 minutes and repeat the cycle three times.

A diamond for Sponge Cola

By Jeff Labadie

In second place, General, recently named the best band in the Philippines, has a new album, "Sponge Cola," that's been a hit. The band has been in the music scene for over 10 years. The album is a mix of rock, pop, and ballads. The band's lead singer, Jeff Labadie, says the album is a reflection of the band's growth and maturity. The album is available on iTunes and Amazon.

"Everyone helped realize this vision. It's a team effort by friends, supporters and even haters." The band has been in the music scene for over 10 years. The album is a mix of rock, pop, and ballads. The band's lead singer, Jeff Labadie, says the album is a reflection of the band's growth and maturity. The album is available on iTunes and Amazon.

Looking back, how would you describe the progress of your songwriting? I would describe it as a journey. The band has been in the music scene for over 10 years. The album is a mix of rock, pop, and ballads. The band's lead singer, Jeff Labadie, says the album is a reflection of the band's growth and maturity. The album is available on iTunes and Amazon.

writing progress. In the song "The People," which I wrote when I was 12, there's a message and a melody, as opposed to "Oh No" which is very straightforward. Not much metaphor there, just wordplay. Similarly, "Taming" is also very direct. It's about people knocking things within the context of a barbed wire. We're not... yes, direct.

Which album best captures the essence of why the band exists? It would have to be the most recent one, "Sponge Cola." The band exists because we love what we do, and we want to share our music with others. The album is a mix of rock, pop, and ballads. The band's lead singer, Jeff Labadie, says the album is a reflection of the band's growth and maturity. The album is available on iTunes and Amazon.

How do you deal with the challenges of a changing music industry, even as your "Sponge Cola" EP has reportedly gone diamond? It has gone diamond, which is a great achievement. The band has been in the music scene for over 10 years. The album is a mix of rock, pop, and ballads. The band's lead singer, Jeff Labadie, says the album is a reflection of the band's growth and maturity. The album is available on iTunes and Amazon.
